Affidavite and Tears in Jefferson Market This Morning-A Tin-Roofer Gave Them to Her and Ho Found Them-The Cominlant Releated and the Kind-Hearted Magistrate Dismissed the Case.

Nellie Mead, a petite and pretty Bostonese, stood before Police Justice O'Reilly at Jefon Market Court this morning, charged with having negotiated four bogus $25 bills of the Banca Español of Havana, for which she received $28 from Broker Manuel A. Roso,

Nellie had sunny bair in profusive crinkles and a Vassar pug; she had ripe red lips and oh! such large beautiful blue eyes, fringed with long lashes and surmounted by curved with long lashes and surmounted by curved brown brows.

But the pretty eyes were swollen with weeping, and her voice was broken by sobs. She was clad in a tailor-made sacque of wine-colored velvet, a black velvet hat with a bunch of bine violets, and a skirt of olive green silk trimmed with satin and passementerie of the same hus.

Detective Hurd had just brought her in from Police Headquarters, where she spent last night. Accompanying them was her brother, a dry goods salesman, and Broker Rose, a swarthy Cuban, who seemed to feel as bad as the young woman.

Justice C'Reilly gazed kindly at the young woman over his glasses, and Nellie sobbed out:

out: "I live with my brother George at 125 Livingston street, Brooklyn, and am a sales-woman at Hurd & Waite's dry-goods store in Brooklyn. I sm twenty-four years old and I came to live with my brother three months ago for my health. My home is m Boston.

"I got acquainted with a tin roofer named Fred Obersheimer, and he was at work patching the roof on our house. I played casino with him, and he playfully gave me a number of bills.

"Afterwards a lawyer told me the bills might be good, and I took them to Mr. Roso. He gave me money for them. Yesterday I went again to get some cashed and I was arrested. I did not know they were counterfeit and meant no wrong."

Oberaheimer had gone to Buffalo to live.
Brother George corroborated his pretty sister, and a telegram from Buffalo was submitted. It was as follows:

HIS SON A MEMBER OF GEN. TRACY'S NEW LAW FIRM.

If there were any left who doubted that Secretary of the Navy B. F. Tracy was not appointed to President Harrison's Cabinet at the personal solicitation and suggestion of Thas. C. Platt, the new Secretary's action yesterday must have set all doubts at rest.

Before leaving for Washington yesterday Secretary Tracy formed a new law partner-ship by associating himself with the law firm of Tracy, Boardman & Platt, the Platt of the firm being the son of the Republican boss of that name.

Everything points to Tom Platt as the grand dispenser of Federal patronage for the State of New York, and, while he would have liked to have had a title of honor go with the position, the Boss will manage to get a great deal of pleasure from a contemplation of the had little Miller boys, who look on with envious eyes from the other side of the fence at Platt's pair setting the plums. MISS NELLIE GOES FREE. NO CUBAN TRIP FOR GROVER. UP SHE BOBS ONCE MORE.

BUT NOT MR. CLEVELAND.

Col. Lumont Says His Late Chief Could Not Possibly Find Time New for Such a Tour-Interesting Side of Dan's New Connection With Whitney, Payne, Cleveland & Co.

The good people of Gotham were not a little surprised this morning when they saw it reported in the newspapers that Citizen Grover Cleve and, after not more than a fortnight's residence among them, was to be off again with the leading members of his late Cabinet for a pleasure cruise among the West Indies.

They had supposed be was hustling around trying to get settled down here permanently and devoting what time he had to spare from this important matter to studying up law questions and accustoming himself to the duties and responsibilities of a New York attorney and counsellor.

The story was that the ex-President had discovered that he needed a little rest and recreation, and that he had accordingly formed a congenial little travelling party, consisting of himself and Messrs, Bayard, Fairchild, Whitney, Vilas, Dickinson and Lamont, in fact, every one of his recent cabinet officers excepting Messrs. Endicott and Garland, to make a trp to the West Indies by easy stages, and spend three or four weeks in Cuba, Hayti and other places of interest in that quarter of the globe.

There were to be no ladies in the party. There were to be no ladies in the party, and the trip, which was planned in Washington on Inauguration Day, was intended to begin on Monday next.

Col. Dan Lamont had just finished his breakfast at the Victoria this morning when an Eventso World reporter intercepted him on his way to the elevator, and tackled him upon the all-absorbing topic of interest.

"Really." he said, "this is the first I've heard of such a scheme and so far as I am heard of such a scheme and so far as I am

Col. I amont declined to say anything about his new firm, of which William C. Whitney and Col. Oliver H. Paine are the senior merubers, on the ground that it was a matters of private business. His business headquarters are on the fourth flour of the Mills Building, and the gilt letters upon the entrance to the suite of offices which the firm occupies reads:

W. C. WHITSEY. O. H. PAYNE. DANIEL S. LAMONT.

The principal business of the firm will be to attend to the various railroad and corpora-tion interests that Mr. Whitney and his brother-in-law, Col. Both Mr. Whitney and Col. Payne are stock-holders and directors in the latter corporation, and a movement has been going on for some time past, as was told in The Evening World on Saturday, to make this road the connecting link of an important trunk line to be established between New York and Boston. In most of those interests the new firm has direct relations with Mr. Cleveland's law firm, and ex-Secretary Fairchild's new Trust (Company 50, it seems to be a sert family Company, so it seems to be a sort family affair all around, with its own banking-bouse, law firm and railway managers right in the same circle.

BAYARD, VILAS AND DICKINSON MAY GO, MRS. TERESA CARTER-ADAMS-FRANCIS IN ANOTHER STEW.

> She Fires Shots from Her Window This Time-Just Emptied a Revolver to Preered from Her First Husband's Bullets, and Married Again in Spite of Bad

> "I'm sure that face has been before me before," mused Police Justice O'Reilly, balf aloud, at the Jefferson Market Court this morning, as a much wrinkled but once handsome and still rosy cheeked woman, with mild blue eyes, and wavy bair, that was once as black as the night but is streaked with gray, stood before him.

"I'm sure she's been here, either as prisoner or complainant."

So she had, and in both capacities. It was Mrs. Toresa Francis. July 12, last, she was known as Mrs. Adams, but a little prior to that she had been introduced as Mrs. Richard B. Carter.

Carter was a stevedore, and he and his wife spent many mornings in Jefferson Market Court. She accused him of bigamy, perjury and a dozen other things, but he succeeded in clearing himself of all her charges. They separated, and he resumed the name of a former husband, Adams.

They separated, and he resumed the name of a former husband, Adams.

On July 12 they met in front of 148 West Twen y second street. He asked her to live with him; she rejused, whereupon he drew a pistol and shot her twice in the side. Then he fired a bullet into his own brain.

Both were taken to the New York Hospital, where he died. Three months ago, the woman having recovered, she appeared before Police Justice Patterson in Jefferson Market Court. She led a tall, slender youth of twenty-five to the bar. He had beaut ful little side whiskers and bluehed like a schoolgirl. It was William J. Francis, and taking advantage of her leap-year privilege, she was going 30 marry him.

Justice Patterson performed the ceremony. Last night at 8.30 o'clock Officer J. B. Smith and lots of other people were startled by four pistol reports from a third-story window of No. 164 West Twenty-second street. Officer Smith rushed into the house, and, saining the third floor, found a demure-featured woman there.

It was Mrs. Francis, and she declared that she hadn't heard any pistol-shots at all. She was alone, but the officer searched the room and found a 32-calibre revolver behind a panel.

Mrs. Francis was locked up, and to Justice

Mrs. Francis was locked up, and to Justice

Mrs. Francis was locked up, and to Justice O'Reilly she said this morning, in a voice of sweet persuasiveness:

'The revolver was lying on the dresser. It belonged to Mr. Francis. I thought it might do somebody harm, and so I took it up and fired it off out the window.

'Believe me, I didn't think it was loaded. I took good care to point it into the air. I never held a pistol before in my life."

Justice O'Reilly heard the story of Mrs. Francis's former experience with firearms, and did not wonder at her timidity in respect to pistols. He discharged her, and thank ng him in a sweet, ladylike manner, she passed out of court. In the outer corrider her alim and slender youtful lord and master clasped her in his strong embrace and imprinted a her in his strong embrace and imprinted a caress on her lips and they went gally away. She told the Justice that she was thirty-nine years old, but three handsomely dressed and pretty women in the court audience wept coplously during her examination, and they are said to be her daughters by Adams. They declined to be interviewed, however.

The above singular advertisement apeared in a morning newspaper, and an EVENING WORLD reporter endeavored to dis-over the source of it. Armorer Wylie, at the Twelfth Regiment Armory, at Sixty-first street and Ninth avenue, said he did not know to whom the advertisement referred, and was surprised to see such a thing in print.

The silk-ribbon manufactories were next visited, Aitken & Son, in West Forty-fifth street, being the first.
